“ There was certainly a time when we were each other's priority. We had each other's back in all situations. And we had some situations.....yet we always seemed to come out clean. Then as life would have it, our hearts became captivated by the fairer sex leading to marriage, children, grandchildren, and a few jobs along the way. Priorities shifted for all the right reasons and there literally became miles between us, but I'm thankful we kept in touch all the same. I'll see you soon brother.

To Chris's family I'll say the one thing I know for certain about him. He loved his kids, he loved their mothers, and he loved his Grandkids. With all his being he loved you all so much. He was Proud of you all. And I'm proud of him for being that kind of a father/grandfather.

“ I guess I'll start. I met Chris around 1987. I have so many random, fantastic memories of him. For starters, the night Vic dove out of the car after the deer. The golf club incident. The year it snowed and we all did donuts in the old Kmart parking lot. The old Wooden Nickel. Blackman and Robin(no offense.. it was funny!!). Green Day, Linkin Park. Don't get me started on how we acted at hotels. The cookies I baked. You said your vows to the preacher not me but it was cute and we were both so nervous. I can go on for hours but babe, the point is, it still wasn't enough. I'm grateful you are at peace. I'll cherish that last hug and goodnight. You were an amazing father and provider. The best friend I have ever known. We were all blessed to know you but if this man loved you... Wow... you really knew it. He made damn sure you knew it.
